ON THE DRAFT LAW ON NORMATIVE ACTS OF THE REPUBLIC OF MOLDOVA

Based on an unofficial English translation of the Draft Law

This Opinion was prepared by OSCE/ODIHR based upon expert contributions submitted by Dr. Galina Chirinciuc, Senior Legal Expert from the Republic of Moldova and Prof. St. John Bates, Director of St John Bates Consultancy and Visiting Professor of Law and Director of the Centre for Parliamentary and Legislative Studies at the University of Strathclyde Law School in Scotland

Annex 1: Draft Law on Normative Acts of the Republic of Moldova

I. INTRODUCTION

1. On 3 August 2012, the Ministry of Justice of the Republic of Moldova sent a letter to the OSCE Mission to Moldova (letter no. 03/6476) requesting an OSCE legal review of the Draft Law on Normative Acts of Moldova.
2. The request came in follow-up to the Legislative Assessment project which the OSCE/ODIHR, together with the OSCE Mission to Moldova, conducted in Moldova in 2008-2010. The Explanatory Note appended to the Draft Law on Normative Acts mentions expressly that the latter was drafted “with the main purpose of improving the legislative process in order to ensure the stability, predictability and clarity of legislative acts”, based upon a number of studies and “especially the Reports of the OSCE and ODIHR concerning the Assessment of the Legislative Process in the Republic of Moldova (2008, 2010)”.
3. This Opinion is provided in response to the Minister’s above-mentioned request, by virtue of OSCE/ODIHR’s mandate to, upon request, provide assistance to legislative reforms in OSCE participating States.

II. SCOPE OF REVIEW

4. The scope of the Opinion covers only the above-mentioned Draft Law on Normative Acts of the Republic of Moldova (hereinafter, “Draft Law”), submitted for review. Thus limited, the Opinion does not constitute a full and comprehensive review of all available framework legislation regulating the legislative process in Moldova.
5. The Opinion raises key issues and indicates areas of concern. The ensuing recommendations are based on relevant international standards and good practices. In the interests of concision, the Opinion focuses on problematic areas rather than on the positive aspects of the Draft Law. The Opinion does not address the occasionally inconsistent numbering of Articles, inexact references and grammatical errors, which are understood to be clerical mistakes that will be edited as the Draft Law progresses through the various stages of the legislative process.
6. This Opinion is based on an unofficial translation of the draft Amendments provided by the OSCE Mission to Moldova. Errors from translation may result.
7. In view of the above, the OSCE/ODIHR would like to make mention that this Opinion is without prejudice to any written or oral recommendations and comments to the Draft Law or related legislation that the OSCE/ODIHR may make in the future.

III. EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

8. The OSCE/ODIHR welcomes the Draft Law and considers it a significant step in the process of enhancing the legislative process of Moldova. At the same time, in order to further improve the legislative process, it is recommended as follows:

1. Key Recommendations

- A. To exclude the term “administrative” from, and to add “Parliamentary motions” to Article 1 par. 2 of the Draft Law [pars 13-14]
- B. To amend Article 6 par. 2 to reflect that Governmental ordinances are classified hierarchically at the same level as ordinary laws [par. 15]
- C. To amend Article 8 par. 2 so as to cover also the procedure for revising the Constitution upon citizens’ initiative [par. 18]
- D. In Article 10, to replace par. 3 with a referential provision linking Article 10 to Article 72 par. 3 of the Constitution, or otherwise supplement the enumeration with additional items which are also mentioned in the Constitution [par. 21]
- E. To clarify which Parliamentary decisions and Presidential decrees will require approval by Governmental decision [par. 23]
- F. To prescribe the procedure through which a draft law, for which the Government undertakes a vote of confidence, is drafted, examined, adopted and promulgated [par. 24]
- G. To reconsider Article 70 par. 2, according to which organic and ordinary laws shall be interpreted by the Parliament through the adoption of interpretative provisions, contained in a new law [par. 35]
- H. To specify in Article 73 that normative acts adopted by local public administration authorities and autonomous territorial units with special status will only apply on the territory of the respective territorial unit [par. 38]
- I. To amend Article 76 par. 2 so that enacting bodies are also empowered to review normative acts, along with the bodies responsible for the implementation of normative acts [par. 40]

2. Additional Recommendations

- J. To consider introducing into the Draft Law specific references to the laws and subordinate normative acts which regulate the examination of draft laws in Parliament, the promulgation of laws, the hierarchy and adoption procedure of acts of the local administration bodies, and the procedure for parliamentary control over the execution of laws [pars 10-11]
- K. To add “adoption/approval” to the procedures listed in Article 1 par. 1 [par. 12]
- L. To amend Article 6 par. 2 letters “g)” and “h)” as suggested [par. 16]

- M. To remove references to “departmental” normative acts from Articles 6 and 16 [pars 16 and 25]
- N. To consider amending Article 8 par. 1 of the Draft Law so that it more closely reflects Article 7 of the Constitution [par. 17]
- O. To amend Article 9 and make it more specific, as suggested [pars 19-20]
- P. In Article 12 par. 1 letter “b”, to prescribe with greater precision which particular bodies or institutions could have their structure approved or amended by normative decisions of the Parliament [par. 22]
- Q. In Article 36, to specify which body or agency will be in charge of preparing the anti-corruption expertise [par. 28]
- R. To reconsider the rule from Article 33 par. 4 and Article 34 par. 5, which states that all normative acts bearing the logo “EU” shall be endorsed in priority regime [par. 27]
- S. To consider introducing in Article 48 par. 2 specific deadlines indicating the time-frame within which the relevant state authorities must execute the normative act [par. 29]
- T. To reconsider the provision in Article 55 par. 1 letter “d” which appears to discourage the use of definitions in the drafting of normative acts [par. 30]
- U. In Article 55 par. 1 letter “e”, to provide that the terminology must be consistent not only with the EU legislation but also with other international instruments ratified by the Republic of Moldova [par. 31]
- V. To edit and revise Article 66 of the Draft Law, as suggested [par. 33]
- W. To rephrase the title of Chapter VI to read “Authentic Interpretation of Normative Acts” or “Official Interpretation of Normative Acts” [par. 34]
- X. To clarify, in Article 71, in which exceptional cases normative acts may apply after the expiry of their effective period [par. 36]
- Y. In Article 72, to add “suspension” to the list of situations in which a normative act ceases to produce effects [par. 37]
- Z. To consider rephrasing and simplifying Article 74 [par. 39]
- AA. In Article 79, to qualify the definition of “Code”, as suggested [par. 41]
- BB. To provide in Article 80 that normative acts shall be publicly available [par. 42].

IV. ANALYSIS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

1. Preliminary Remarks

9. The Draft Law seeks to replace two currently existing laws, namely the Law on Legislative Acts (no. 780-XV, from 27 December 2001) and the Law on Normative Acts of the Government and Other Central or Local Public Administration Authorities (no. 317-XV, from 18 July 2003). The said laws prescribe the process of drafting and adoption of laws and subordinated normative acts, respectively, and thus unavoidably contain a considerable number of similar and repetitive provisions. By replacing the two laws with one new law, the current draft unifies, streamlines and consolidates the provisions regulating the legislative process in Moldova, which in itself is a positive step.
10. Of note, the Draft Law regulates the procedure for the initiation, drafting, examination and adoption/approval of normative acts preponderantly at the level of Government and central administrative authorities. The stage of examining draft laws in Parliament is largely unaddressed, as it is regulated by the Regulation of the Parliament (Regulamentul Parlamentului). The Draft Law also does not regulate the stage of promulgation, nor does it deal with the procedure by which the President returns a draft law to Parliament for reconsideration.¹ The Draft Law also does not regulate the hierarchy of the acts of local administration bodies, nor the procedures for their adoption. Furthermore, while the Draft Law prescribes the rules for the re-examination of normative acts and for the monitoring of the application of normative acts, it omits to specify the procedure for parliamentary control over the execution of the laws by the executive.²
11. It is assumed that the above-mentioned omissions are due to the fact that the respective specific procedures are regulated by the Constitution and other laws and subordinate normative acts. To facilitate legal accessibility and awareness, and in the interests of ensuring that the Draft Law provides a comprehensive regulation of the legislative process in its entirety, it is recommended that consideration be given to introducing specific references to those other laws and normative acts in the text of the Draft Law.

2. Detailed Analysis of the Draft Law

12. Article 1 par. 1 provides that the Draft Law “establishes the [...] procedure for initiation, drafting, agreement, expert examination, editing, interpretation, entrance into force and termination of normative acts [...]”. It is recommended to add “adoption/approval” to the above listing, for instance after the word “editing”, as the respective procedures are also tangentially covered by the Draft Law.³

¹ These procedures are regulated by Article 93 of the Constitution of the Republic of Moldova (adopted on 29 July 1994, in force from 27 August 1994).

² See Article 66 letter “f)” of the Constitution of the Republic of Moldova.

³ See, for instance, Article 16 par. 4 of the Draft Law.

13. Article 1 par. 2 provides that “[t]he present law shall not apply to the drafting of individual or political, administrative or other types of acts” (emphasis added). The inclusion of the term “administrative” in this context is problematic given that “administrative acts” – as defined in the Moldovan Law on Administrative Procedures (Legea Contenciosului Administrativ)⁴ – can have a normative character, which would bring them within the scope of the present Draft Law. It is therefore recommended to exclude the term “administrative” from the respective phrase.
14. Bearing in mind that the Moldovan Parliament may adopt not only laws and decisions but also motions,⁵ it is also recommended to add “Parliamentary motions” (“moțiunile Parlamentului”) to the list of acts enumerated in Art. 1 par. 2, to which the present Draft Law shall not apply.
15. Article 6 of the Draft Law prescribes the hierarchy of the normative acts in Moldova. It must be noted that Governmental ordinances (ordonanțele Guvernului) should be classified hierarchically at the same level as [ordinary] laws, based on Article 106² of the Constitution. Such classification of Governmental ordinances on par with ordinary laws is a common feature of all constitutional frameworks modeled after the French Constitution of 1958.⁶ It is therefore recommended to amend Art. 6 par. 2 of the Draft Law accordingly. For the same reasons, the provisions contained in Article 15 of the Draft Law, on Governmental ordinances, should be moved up and placed after Article 11, on ordinary laws, and the numbering of the respective Articles in the Draft Law should be changed accordingly.
16. Article 6 par. 2 letter “g)” currently speaks of “departmental acts and other acts of central public authorities”. This provision would be more clear and concise if rephrased to refer to administrative acts of central public administration authorities – such formulation would also subsume “departmental acts”. In Article 6 par. 2 letters “h)” and “i)”, referring to acts of authorities of autonomous territorial units with special legal status, and acts of local public administration authorities respectively, should more appropriately refer to “normative acts” of said authorities. This would be more accurate, as the authorities indicated therein can also adopt acts of an individual, i.e. non-normative character, which would fall outside the scope of Article 6 par. 2.
17. Article 8 par. 1 provides that “[t]he Constitution of the Republic of Moldova shall be the Supreme Law of the society and the state and no normative act shall contradict its provisions”. This reflects Article 7 of the Constitution, which, however, contains a more explicit prescription on the nullity of unconstitutional acts: “Any law or other juridical act which contravenes the Constitution shall have no legal force”. Article 8 par. 1 could be similarly rephrased.

⁴ Article 2 of the Law on Administrative Procedures defines the “administrative act” as a “unilateral legal manifestation of will, of a normative or individual character, by a public authority for the purposes of organizing the execution, or directly executing, the law”.

⁵ See Article 66 letter “a)” of the Constitution.

⁶ The Constitution of the French Republic of 4 October 1958. See, in particular, Article 38 of the French Constitution, which is very similar to Article 106² of the Moldovan Constitution.

18. Article 8 par. 2 regulates the procedure for making amendments and additions to the Constitution. It bears recalling that the Constitution can also be revised at the initiative of citizens, as detailed in Article 141 of the Constitution. It is recommended to reflect that procedure in the Draft Law as well. The reference to the Regulation of the Parliament, which is the internal regulation for the functioning of the Parliament, does not cover a constitutional amendment by citizens' initiative; it is thus insufficient in this context.
19. Article 9 defines laws as “normative acts adopted by the legislative authority of the state based on constitutional norms, according to the procedure established by the Regulation of the Parliament and by other normative acts in force”. The syntagm “legislative authority of the state” could be replaced with the word “Parliament”, which would render the sentence clearer and more concise, and more in line with the requirements set out in Article 55 par. 1 of the Draft Law on language, spelling and punctuation of normative acts. Similarly, the reference to “other normative acts” at the end of the paragraph would be more specific if those other acts are specifically quoted, either in the same paragraph or in an Annex to the Law. The same applies to Article 17 par. 2 and Article 20 par. 1.
20. In Article 9 par. 2, it is recommended to replace the conjunction “and” with “or”, given that a law cannot be both organic and ordinary at the same time. This would also better reflect Article 72 par. 1 of the Constitution.
21. Article 10 par. 3 of the Draft Law enumerates the subject matter of organic laws, based upon Article 72 par. 3 of the Constitution. Instead of reiterating the provisions of the Constitution, Article 10 par. 3 could be replaced with a simple referential provision, linking it to the respective Article of the Constitution. This would also be more in line with Article 30 par. 4 of the Draft Law, which requires express reference to other existing norms, rather than repetition. Conversely, if the enumeration from Article 10 par. 3 of the Draft Law is retained, then the respective list should be supplemented with the items of “the status of the capital of R. Moldova, the city of Chisinau”, and “the organization, jurisdiction of courts of law and the court procedure”, which, according to the Constitution, must also be regulated by organic laws.⁷
22. Article 12 par. 1 letter “b” provides that Parliament may adopt decisions of a normative character for approving or changing the structure of some bodies or institutions. This provision is rather vague and might leave an excessively wide margin of discretion in its application. It is therefore recommended to prescribe with greater precision which particular bodies or institutions could have their structure approved or amended by normative decisions of the Parliament. Presumably, this will concern the state institutions which are under parliamentary control, such as the Court of Accounts, the Parliamentary Advocate, the National Commission for Financial Values, the National Bank, the Audio-Visual Coordination Council and others.
23. Article 14 par. 2 letter “f)” appears to imply that a decision of the Government shall be necessary for the approval of not only draft laws but also decisions of the Parliament and Presidential decrees. Unless owing to imprecision in translation, it is recommended to clarify which Parliamentary decisions and Presidential decrees will require approval by Governmental decision, as it could raise concerns related to the principle of separation of powers.

24. The Draft Law does not regulate the procedure for cases where the Government assumes responsibility before the Parliament for a program, declaration of generally policy, or draft law.⁸ It is recommended to prescribe the procedure through which a draft law, for which the Government undertakes a vote of confidence, is drafted, examined, adopted and promulgated, so as to clarify what special rules apply in that case.
25. For reasons mentioned earlier in this Opinion (see par. 16 above), in Article 16 of the Draft Law, it is recommended to remove references to “departmental” normative acts” and instead refer only to “normative acts of the central public authorities”.
26. Article 30 par. 4 provides that “[i]n case the draft normative act includes provisions that are already regulated by other normative acts in force, the author of the draft shall not reproduce them, but shall make express reference to the main normative act that includes them” (emphasis added). This provision is further reinforced by Article 56 of the Draft Law, which requires the precise indication of the relevant article from the law referred to, along with the title, number and date of the said law. The requirement of an express and precise reference to another normative act (rather than to “the legislation in force”, as is often the case currently) reflects one of the main recommendations made by ODIHR in its Assessment of the Legislative Process in the Republic of Moldova (2010),⁹ and is highly commendable as it seeks to enhance overall legal accessibility and foreseeability. For similar reasons, and also in the interests of legal cohesion and consistency, it is laudable that Article 32 par. 1 letter “h)” of the Draft Law requires that the informative note appended to any draft law specifies which normative acts will have to be drafted or amended after the enactment of the respective draft normative act.
27. Article 33 par. 4 and Article 34 par. 5 provide that all normative acts bearing the logo “EU” shall be endorsed by the relevant state institutions in a priority regime. Automatically putting every draft normative act bearing the logo “EU” through a fast-track procedure raises concerns with respect to both the procedure employed and the quality of the normative act as finally adopted. It is therefore recommended to amend the respective Articles so that the priority rule is not automatic but rather used on an individual, act-by-act basis.
28. Article 36 of the Draft Law regulates the legal and anti-corruption expertise, which must accompany all draft normative acts. While the requirement to prepare an “anti-corruption expertise” is welcome in itself, it is not clear which body or agency will be in charge of preparing this expertise (it might relate to the Anti-Corruption Centre, or civil society organizations active in this field, or both). It is recommended for the Draft Law to specify this, just as it

⁸ See Article 106¹ of the Constitution of R. Moldova.

⁹ OSCE/ODIHR Assessment of the Legislative Process in the Republic of Moldova (2010), available online at http://www.legislationline.org/download/action/download/id/3197/file/Assessment%20of%20the%20Legislative%20Process_2010_en.pdf

specifies which bodies are responsible for the economic expertise (the Ministry of Economy), the financial expertise (The Ministry of Finance), the scientific expertise (specialized scientific institutions) and the environmental expertise (the Ministry of the Environment).

29. In Article 48 par. 2, on final provisions including regulations on the obligation for relevant state authorities to execute the normative act, international good practice would suggest the introduction of specific deadlines for such obligations.
30. Article 55 par. 1 letter “d)” states that concepts shall be explained by means of “a respective term”, and not by means of definition or description. This provision thus appears to discourage the use of definitions in the drafting of normative acts. If that is indeed the case, then this rule contradicts not only the drafting technique of the current Draft Law itself (see Article 2 of the Draft Law, on “Notions”), but also international experience, which suggests that the proper use of definitions is an advantage in legislation. It is recommended that this provision be reconsidered. Perhaps, what was meant in the respective provision was the rule, established in the legislative drafting technique, according to which, in the context of normative drafting, the same notion should always be expressed through the same term.
31. Article 55 par. 1 letter “e” provides that the “terminology used in the draft act shall be constant and uniform as in other normative acts and norms of the legislation of the European Union”. Such terminology should also be consistent with other international instruments ratified by the Republic of Moldova, such as UN treaties or Council of Europe Conventions, the language of which may also not always be reflected in EU legislation.
32. Article 55 par. 3 provides that “[i]n case when after the adoption of the normative act and its coming into force contradictions arise between the text in the state language and its translation in another language functioning in the Republic of Moldova, the provisions established by the text in the state language shall prevail”. This new provision is a welcome clarification. As was mentioned in the OSCE/ODIHR report on the Assessment of the Legislative Process in the Republic of Moldova, the currently existing legal framework in Moldova provides that the authentic text of enacted primary legislation is only in the “state language”, but that Russian translations of draft laws, legislative proposals and amendments to draft laws may be working documents in the parliamentary legislative process.¹⁰ Article 55 par. 3 is a commendable enactment of the OSCE/ODIHR recommendation to clearly prescribe that the texts of draft laws in the “state language” are the binding version in cases where any inconsistencies or discrepancies arise from the process of translation.¹¹
33. Article 66 stipulates that the entry into force of normative acts of the Parliament, Government, specialized central authorities, and authorities with autonomous or local status takes place on the date when they are published in the Official Gazette (“Monitorul Oficial”) or on the date specified in the law. It is recommended to edit par. 1 of this Article, because the normative acts of authorities with autonomous or local status are not published in the Official Gazette (“Monitorul Oficial”). It is also recommended to revise par. 2 of the Article, given that there are no Official Gazettes “of rayons, municipalities and of autonomous territorial units” (“monitoare oficiale ale raioanelor, municipiilor și ale nițărilor teritoriale autonome”). Of note, the coming into force of local normative acts is regulated by the Law on Local Public Administration, which provides that “[t]he decisions of a normative character enter into force at the date of their being made public through publication or through posting in public locations [...]. Decisions of a normative character shall be presented, within 5 days from being signed, to the territorial office of the State Chancellery, and shall enter into force at the moment of being made public”.¹²

¹⁰ See Article 19 of the Law on Legislative Acts and Article 47(8) and (10) of the Law on the Regulation of Parliament.

¹¹ See the OSCE/ODIHR Assessment of the Legislative Process in the Republic of Moldova (2010), pages 54-55.

34. The title of Chapter VI, now named “Interpretation of Normative Acts” could be changed to read “Authentic Interpretation of Normative Acts”, or “Official Interpretation of Normative Acts”, given that there are also other types of interpretation of normative acts – such as judicial, scholarly interpretation – which are not all covered by the provisions of the said Chapter.
35. According to Article 70 par. 2, organic and ordinary laws shall be interpreted by the Parliament through the adoption of interpretative provisions, contained in a new law. Unless owing to a lack of conceptual clarity between, on the one hand, interpretation of legislation, and on the other, amending it to clarify its meaning (the latter clearly being a role of the parliament or the respective enacting authority), then this provision is to be discouraged. The practice of issuing interpretative provisions through the adoption of separate laws, rather than the formal amendment of the original law, presents some disadvantages. It may render the law less accessible, and it also tends to reduce an emphasis on good clear drafting, because the drafter may unconsciously consider that if accurate and precise legislative language cannot be readily found at the time of drafting, the matter can be resolved later by an interpretative notice. For these reasons, it would be preferable for the procedure of interpretative notes to be replaced with the formal amendment of the respective legislative texts.
36. Article 71 par. 3 provides that “[n]ormative acts may be applied after the expiry of their effective period only in exceptional order”. It is recommended to clarify and further elaborate this provision. While it may relate to on-going contractual obligations that were entered into based on the previous law, which had been repealed in the meantime,¹³ the exception should be spelled out with greater clarity, in the interests of legal certainty and foreseeability.
37. Article 72 of the Draft Law regulates the cessation of effects of normative acts. It is recommended to add “suspension” to the list of situations in which a normative act ceases to produce effects.
38. Article 73 par. 1, which prescribes that “[n]ormative acts shall be applicable on the entire territory of the Republic of Moldova”, should be qualified with a provision reiterating that normative acts adopted by local public administration authorities and autonomous territorial units with special status will only apply on the territory of the respective territorial unit, in keeping with Article 17 of the Draft Law and Article 20 par. 2 of the Law on the Normative Acts of the Government and Other Authorities of the Central and Local Public Administration.¹⁴

¹² See Article 20 par. 5 and Article 32 par. 2 of the Law on Local Public Administration (adopted on 28 December 2006, in force from 9 March 2007).

¹³ See Article 6 par. 4 of the Civil Code of Moldova (adopted on 6 June 2002, in force from 12 June 2003).

39. The drafting structure of Article 74 par. 1 on the applicability of normative acts on persons, appears over-elaborate. Since the different categories listed therein are not treated differently, there is no need to identify them in separate sub-paragraphs. Instead, par. 1 could simply state that normative acts shall apply to all natural and legal persons on the territory of Moldova. (Actul normativ se aplică tuturor persoanelor fizice și juridice aflate pe teritoriul Republicii Moldova). Par. 2 could then specify that the application of normative acts to foreign nationals, stateless persons and legal entities registered in Moldova is determined by the international treaties to which Moldova is a party [...].
40. Article 76 regulates the “review” (or “re-examination”) of normative acts, and provides in par. 2 that “[t]he review shall be made by the bodies responsible for the implementation of the normative acts”. It would appear sensible to include also the enacting bodies among the ones empowered to review the normative acts. It is recommended to amend Article 76 par. 2 to that effect.
41. Article 79 defines the Code as “a normative act that unites and systematizes the most important norms within a certain area of law”. It should be noted that some Codes would not fit within this “classic” definition – e.g., Code of Ethics of the Civil Servant,¹⁵ or the Judge’s Ethics Code¹⁶ – and for that reason, it is recommended to include the syntagm “as a rule” (“de regulă”) in the above-quoted definition.
42. Article 80, on the “State Registration and Official Record of Normative Acts”, could be enhanced with a brief provision stating that the [records of] normative acts will be publicly available.

Annex 1: Draft Law on Normative Acts of the Republic of Moldova

LAW

on Normative Acts

The Parliament hereby adopts present organic law.

Chapter I

GENERAL PROVISIONS

Article 1. Scope of Regulation

(1) The present law establishes the categories and the hierarchy of normative acts, the procedure for initiation, drafting, agreement, expert examination, editing, interpretation, entrance into force and termination of normative acts, as well as norms of legislative technique applied for the purpose.

(2) The present law shall not apply to the drafting of individual or political, administrative or other types of acts that do not include norms of law, and acts of the working bodies of the Parliament, Government or other central or local public authorities.

Article 2. Concepts

For the purpose of the present law, the following main concepts shall be used:

a) normative act – act adopted by a public authority that includes a set of legally binding, general and impersonal norms that are applied repeatedly to the indefinite number of identical situations;

b) author of the draft – official person or public authority with the right of legislative initiative, competent to elaborate a draft normative act;

c) legislative technique – a totality of norms, methods and proceedings aimed at ensuring a systematic, unique and coordinated content of legal regulations;

d) explanatory note – a document attached to each draft normative act that comprises arguments concerning the necessity of adopting the draft;

e) justification of the draft – a complex of research and investigations carried out before initiating elaboration of the draft, that argues for the need of initiating such regulation of social relations in order to establish behavioral norms;

f) impact ex-ante analysis – the process of identifying the problem, determining objectives, options for settling the problem or for achieving the objectives and analysis of effects or consequences of such options aimed at justifying the necessity of regulating social relations;

g) monitoring the implementation – the process of identifying the real impact during and after implementation of the normative act that allows identification of correctional measures as well as of measures aimed at improving the drafting of future regulations;

h) EU logo – logo marking the draft normative acts elaborated in order to harmonize national legislation with the legislation of the European Union.

Article 3. Main Principles of Drafting Normative Acts

(1) A normative act shall correspond to the constitutional provisions and comply with the legal codification and unification system of the Republic of Moldova.

(2) The following principles shall be complied with in the process of drafting, adopting and interpreting normative acts:

a) legality, opportunity, coherence, consistency and correlation of competing norms;

b) continuity, stability and predictability of norms of law;

c) transparency, publicity and accessibility;

d) subordination to higher normative acts.

(3) Normative acts should not contradict the provisions of international treaties to which Republic of Moldova is a party to, the generally recognized principles and norms of international law.

Article 4. Characteristics and Quality of Normative Acts

(1) A normative act shall have national, binding, general and impersonal character.

(2) Provisions of normative act shall be subject to execution, and shall be binding for all subjects of law and, when necessary, their execution shall be imposed by constraint powers of the state.

(1) Normative act shall be integrated in the system of legislation in an organized manner, and for this purpose:

a) the draft normative act should be correlated with the provisions of related normative acts of higher or the same level, with the provisions of the legislation of the European Union, with the legislative multi-annual programs of the Parliament and action plans of the Government, as well as with the international treaties to which Republic of Moldova is a party to;

b) the normative act drafted based on a normative act of a higher level cannot exceed the limits of the competence instituted through the respective act and cannot contravene its scope, principles and regulations.

Article 5. General, Special and Extraordinary Normative Acts

(1) Depending on the character of its norms, normative acts shall be subdivided into general, special and extraordinary acts.

(2) General normative act shall contain norms of law applicable to all social relations or subjects of law or to certain types of relations or certain categories of subjects, without prejudicing the general character of the norms.

(3) A special normative act shall contain norms of law applicable exclusively to some types of social relations or categories of subjects according to a strictly defined procedure which represents a deviation from the general rule. In the event of contradictions between norms of general and special normative acts with equal legal effect, the norms of special normative acts shall prevail.

(4) An extraordinary normative act shall regulate social relations generated by emergency situations. An extraordinary normative act represents a deviation from general and special acts. In the event of contradictions between norms of general or special normative act and an extraordinary normative act with equal legal effect, the norms of extraordinary normative act shall prevail.

Chapter II.

HIERARCHY AND CATEGORIES OF NORMATIVE ACTS

Section 1. Hierarchy of Normative Acts

Article 6. Hierarchy of Normative Acts

(1) The hierarchy of normative acts is structured according to their category and the issuing competent public authority.

(2) The totality of normative acts is hierarchically constituted of the following:

- a) the Constitution of the Republic of Moldova;
- b) laws;
- c) decisions of the Parliament;

Article 21. Legislative Programs of the Parliament

(1) For the purposes of regulating all areas of social relations, for transparency of the decision making process, and also for harmonizing normative acts with the legislation of the European Union, the Parliament shall adopt legislative programs.

(2) A legislative program shall include names of normative acts to be drafted and amended in order to harmonize them with the norms of the European Union legislation in the areas of social relations that need to be regulated; bodies and institutions responsible for drafting the respective normative acts and consulting them with the interested parties; references to the norms of the European Union legislation, if necessary; and other aspects related to the program implementation.

(3) Legislative programs may be amended and supplemented by the Parliament at the proposal of subjects with the right of legislative initiative.

(4) Legislative programs shall envisage drafting of the most important normative acts and at the same time shall not represent an obstacle for drafting other normative acts than the ones included in the program.

(5) After their adoption, legislative programs shall be published in Monitorul Oficial of the Republic of Moldova and on the official web page of the Parliament.

Article 22. Action Plans of the Government

(1) Government adopts multi-annual action plans in order to ensure carrying out of the tasks included in the activity programs and in order to organize the implementation of laws.

(2) Action plans shall include the actions that need to be carried out in the fields that follow to be regulated, the list of authorities and institutions that follow to implement them in consultation with the interested parties, the time limits for their implementation, as well as, when necessary, the references to the norms of the European Union legislation, and other details related to their implementation.

(3) When drafting Government's action plans, attention should be paid to the provisions related to the execution of normative acts, proposals advanced in this regard by the subjects with the right to initiate them, by the scientific institutions, as well as proposals advanced by the citizens and their associations.

(4) Government's action plans may be amended and supplemented by the Government, upon the proposal of interested authorities and institutions.

(5) Action plans shall also include programs of harmonization of the national legislation to the legislation of the European Union.

Article 23. Policy Documents

(1) Public policy documents represent decision making instruments that address problems existing in certain areas, identify tools for solving them and describe the expected impact on the state and society.

(2) Policy documents in major directions of domestic and foreign policy of the state that are approved by the law or, if necessary, by the decision of the Parliament, are the following:

- a) concept papers;
- b) strategy papers.

(3) A concept paper is a system of common goals directed at multilateral interpretation of problems from different areas that includes description of the situation and detailed definition of the problem, tools and ways to solve the problem and impact assessment.

(4) A strategy paper is a document reflecting the situation in a certain area, containing anticipated direction of activities for a medium term (4-7 years) or a long term (8-15 years), aiming at identifying methods and mechanisms for achieving the goals.

(5) Types and structure of policy documents, as well as the manner of their drafting, approving, monitoring and assessment at the level of central public administration are established by the Government.

Section 2. Justification Process

Article 24. Justification of the Need to Draft Normative Acts

(1) Drafting of normative acts is preceded by the justification process in order to be well-aware of the social-economic realities that follow to be regulated, of the relevant normative framework, as well as similar regulations in the legislation of other countries.

(2) In case of certain regulations that have major impact on the budget or that envisage structural or institutional reorganization and reforms, the justification process shall be carried out by application of methodology concerning ex-ante analysis of public policies impact approved by the Government.

(3) Justification process shall be initiated by the subjects that put forward the initiative of drafting of normative act. In order to determine the opportunity of initiating legal interventions, the subjects of the initiative to draft normative act may request the assistance of other central and local public institutions, public associations, experts, scientists, and university professors.

Article 25. Main Steps of the Justification Process

(1) The process of justification of normative acts shall include the following steps:

- a) definition of the problem that shall start from analysis of the existing and future social relations, as well as of the inefficiency or lack of relevant normative framework;
- b) determination of objective and of the field of legal intervention;

c) identification of options and necessary means for achieving the objective through analysis of financial, fiscal, administrative, economic, social, environment impact, etc.

d) comparison of the proposed options and selection of the best options for achieving the objective.

(2) The recommended options should be based on constitutional provisions, on norms of national legislation, of European Union legislation and norms of international treaties to which Republic of Moldova is a party to, on constitutional jurisdiction and judicial practice, as well as on the legal doctrine in the field.

(3) The justification process shall be necessarily finalized with elaboration of a report or, according to paragraph (2) Article 21, with elaboration of a policy proposal that would serve as informational support for elaboration of the draft normative act and of the explanatory note.

Section 3. Drafting of Normative Acts

Article 26. Norms of Legislative Technique

(1) Norms of legislative technique ensure systematization, unification and coordination of normative acts, the adequate character of their content and legal form.

(2) Norms of legislative technique define constituent parts of the normative act, structure, form and manner of systematizing its content, technical methods concerning amendment, introduction of additions, entrance into force, termination, as well as the language and style of the normative act.

(3) Norms of legislative technique are mandatory in the process of drafting of normative acts of the Parliament, Government, of the central public authorities, authorities of autonomous territorial units with special legal status, as well as of local public administration bodies.

Article 27. Main Stages of the Drafting Process

(1) Drafting of normative acts is composed of several consecutive stages, according to the rules and norms of legislative technique.

(2) Drafting of normative acts includes the following stages:

a) creation of working groups and providing technical, organizational and financial support to the drafting process;

and higher education institutions, practitioners from the respective field and other specialists, as well as representatives of interested parties.

(2) In case drafting of normative act is assigned to several specialized central public administration authorities, the elaboration process shall be organized by the institution commissioned by the Government or by the institution that is first on the list.

(3) Central public authorities, authorities of autonomous territorial units with special legal status, as well as local public administration authorities shall assign the drafting of a normative act to a sub-division or create a working group composed of specialists from different sub-divisions.

(4) The working group should necessarily include at least two experts with high education in law and with working experience in the field of law for at least three years. The working groups at the level of central public administration bodies must necessarily include collaborators of legal services from the authorities involved in the drafting process.

(5) Members of the working group shall be either contracted or shall work without a contract. In the latter case, when they are referred for this purpose from their permanent place of employment, they shall be given a markup to their salary for participation in drafting the normative act.

(6) The institution that is drafting the normative act shall provide all necessary technical, organizational and financial support for ensuring the drafting process. Upon the decision of the contracted author of the draft normative act, the assistance of the specialists, special commissions, scientific institutions, scientists, including from abroad might be requested.

(7) The procedure of remuneration of the services requested based on the contract shall be established by the authority responsible for drafting the normative act. A special fund is annually created in the state budget of the Parliament for covering the expenses related to the drafting process.

Article 29. Determining the Concept, Category and Establishing the Structure of the Draft Normative Act

Based on the provisions of legislative programs of the Parliament and of action plans of the Government, on the initial proposals, results of scientific investigations, of comparative studies, as well as based on the results of the justification process, the initiator of the draft normative act or, respectively, the working group, shall determine the concepts and establish the category and structure of the draft normative act. The concepts and notions determined should be compatible or similar to those used in the legislation of the European Union.

Article 30. Drafting of Normative Acts

(1) The first draft normative act shall be elaborated based on initial proposals, results of scientific investigations and justification reports, as well as on other materials and consultations of the interested parties.

(2) Solutions proposed by the draft normative act must cover the whole spectrum of social relations that represent the regulation subject in order to avoid legislative gaps.

(3) The draft normative act may contain definitions of terms and concepts used in the new regulation that have different meaning than the usual one, in order to ensure their correct understanding and avoid erroneous interpretations. The terms used should be compatible or similar with those used in the legislation of the European Union.

(4) In cases the draft normative act includes provisions that are already regulated by other normative acts in force, the author of the draft shall not reproduce them, but shall make express reference to the main normative act that includes them.

(5) The institution competent to issue normative acts may request elaboration of alternative draft normative acts from the authorities, as well as from some organizations, based on contract or on a competition process.

Article 31. Harmonization of National Legislation with the Legislation of the European Union

(1) Harmonization of national legislation follows to be carried out in priority fields, established in bilateral agreements between the Republic of Moldova and the European Union and its member states, as well as in the fields established by the Parliament and the Government.

(2) The mechanism of harmonization of the national legislation with the legislation of the European Union is established by the Government.

(3) The draft normative acts that harmonize the provisions of the national legislation with the legislation of the European Union are marked in the right corner above of the first page with the logo „EU”.

Article 32. Explanatory Note of the Draft Normative Act

(1) Simultaneously with the process of drafting the normative act, the working group shall prepare an explanatory note to the draft normative act, which should necessarily include the following:

a) the name of the initiator and the author, as well as of the participants in the drafting process;

b) description of issues tackled in the draft normative act in the light of the normative framework in force;

Section 2. Content of Normative Acts

Article 51. Article

(1) Article is the main structural element of a normative act of the Parliament or a decree of the President of the Republic of Moldova. Article has unitary character and shall contain one or several directly interconnected sentences that follow the same idea.

(2) As a rule, articles shall have titles. The title of the article shall concisely express the regulating subject, without having a separate meaning in the content of the Article.

(3) Articles shall be numbered with Arabic numerals and shall have continuous numbering starting from the first article through to the final one. If a normative act consists of one single article, numbering is replaced with the formula "Unique Article".

(4) In case of laws introducing amendments and additions to several normative acts, a separate article shall be dedicated to each act and numbered with Roman numerals.

(5) Articles may consist of paragraphs.

Article 52. Point

(1) Point is the main structural element of normative acts of the Government and normative acts of central public authorities, authorities of autonomous territorial units with special legal status and local public administration authorities.

(2) Points are stipulated without utilization of the word "point" and shall have continuous numbering starting from the beginning and until the end of the normative act, introducing dot after the number.

(3) To ensure correct interpretation and easy application, points are divided in sub-points and paragraphs. Sub-points are numbered with Arabic numerals and a bracket and might have separate parts numbered with Latin letters and a bracket.

Article 53. Paragraph

(1) In case when one article or point includes several legal prescriptions, it shall be structured in different paragraphs, by ensuring at the same time the logic sequence of ideas and the coherence of the regulation.

(2) The paragraph is usually composed of a single sentence or phrase that shall regulate a legal hypothesis specific to the Article or point as a whole. In case the content cannot be expressed in one single sentence or phrase, new sentences and phrases can be added, which shall be separated through comma or dot.

(3) Within the article, the paragraphs are numbered with Arabic numerals, which are included between the two brackets, and they might have sub-divisions numbered with Latin letters and a single bracket. In case of more complex structures, such divisions are numbered with Arabic numerals and a single bracket. The divisions numbered with numerals might have sub-divisions marked with small Latin letters and a single bracket. In case when sub-divisions or divisions marked with Latin letters are divided, their parts are marked with Arabic numerals followed by a dot.

(4) In case of point, the paragraph is emphasized by slightly placing it towards the right side. In case when the point includes divisions, they are usually marked with small Latin letters and a bracket.

Article 54. Systematization and Structure of Normative Acts

(1) Depending on the volume of the normative act, the elements of the text shall be grouped as follows:

- a) articles or sub-points may be grouped in parts numbered with Arabic numerals;
- b) sections may be grouped in chapters numbered with Roman numerals;
- c) chapters may be grouped in titles numbered with Roman numerals;
- d) in case of codes and particularly complex and voluminous normative acts, the titles may be grouped into parts or books numbered with ordinal numbers written out in letters.

(2) Sections, chapters, titles, parts or books may have titles that shall concisely express the essence of the provisions they include.

(3) A greater division shall be applied after the use of a simplified division.

(4) Chapters, titles, parts or books are consecutively numbered from the beginning to the end of the normative act. Sections are numbered according to the succession in the structure where they part of.

Article 55. Language, Spelling and Punctuation in Normative Acts

b) one phrase shall express only one idea;

c) adequate terms shall be used, as well as terms compatible with those used in the legislation of the European Union or similar to them, which have large circulation;

d) concepts shall be explained not by means of definition or description but by means of a respective term;

e) terminology used in the draft act shall be constant and uniform as in other normative acts and norms of the legislation of the European Union; the same concept shall be used provided it is correct and its repeated use shall exclude ambiguity;

f) neologisms should not be used, in case when synonyms with large use are available. In case new concepts and foreign expressions need to be used, whenever possible, their equivalent in state language should be mentioned;

g) no regionalisms, nonfunctional, idiomatic, rare and(or) ambiguous words and expressions shall be used;

h) legal tautology shall be excluded;

i) whenever possible, mono-semantic concepts shall be used, according to the legal terminology. In case a concept is poli-semantic, the meaning used shall clearly derive from the text;

î) abbreviations of certain names or concepts may be used only after they are explained in the text when used for the first time;

j) the verbs are usually used at present tense.

(2) The author of the draft normative act shall submit the text of the draft to the body competent to adopt the draft in the state language. Translation in another language functioning on the territory of the Republic of Moldova follows to be ensured by the body responsible for adoption.

(3) In case when after adoption of the normative act and its coming into force contradictions arise between the text in the state language and its translation in another language functioning in the Republic of Moldova, the provisions established by the text in the state language shall prevail.

Article 56. Reference to Other Normative Acts

(1) In case when a legal norm concerning the regulation subject is regulated by another normative act, a reference to the specific Article and the normative act including that Article shall be made in order to avoid reproducing complementary norms. Reference to another reference norm usually shall not be allowed.

(2) In case the norm to which reference is made is included in another normative act, the title, number and date of the act must be also indicated.

(3) Reference to the norms of another normative act may be made to the entire content of the respective act or only to a specific provision. In case the act referred to has been amended, added or republished, a specific reference should be made in this sense.

(4) Upon amendment, addition and invalidation of the provision that is referred to, the act on amendment, addition or invalidation should consider the legal situation of the reference norm.

Chapter V.

TECHNICAL PROCEDURES APPLICABLE TO NORMATIVE ACTS

Section 1. Amendments and Additions to Normative Acts

Article 57. Amendments of Normative Acts

(1) Amendment of normative acts represents an express change of the text of the article, of its points or paragraphs and its formulation in a new version.

(2) In order to express the intention of amending the normative act in a normative manner, the text in question shall be expressly nominated, with all necessary identification elements, and the provision in itself is formulated by using the phrase „is amended and shall have the following content:”, followed by formulation of the new text. Only certain parts (paragraphs, sub-points) of Articles and points may be formulated in a new version.

(3) In case when there is no need for Articles and points that are amended to be formulated entirely in a new version, certain clarifications are introduced in their text by omitting, substituting or introducing certain words or phrases.

(4) In case when the text of a part or of a book, a title, a chapter, a section, a point, article, paragraph, sub-point or its sub-division is totally excluded, their numbering is not passed to other structural elements.

(5) In case when it is necessary to introduce amendments in several parts of the document in force or in case the respective document was already substantially amended or in case the document is outdated, the draft of a new normative act shall be elaborated.

Article 58. Additions to Normative Acts

(1) Additions to normative acts mean introduction of new provisions that include normative solutions and additional assumptions.

(2) In case of supplementing a normative act with new structural elements, these shall be numbered by means of adding a respective index to the number of the corresponding part, title, chapter, section, article, paragraph, point, sub-point or sub-divisions. In case additions are introduced after the last point, last paragraph or last letter, they will receive a new and subsequent number, paragraph or letter.

Article 59. General Conditions for Amendments and Additions

(1) Amendment or addition to normative act is allowed only if it does not affect the general concept or the unitary character of the respective act. Or, the respective act is replaced with a new regulation, and follows to be entirely invalidated.

(2) The provisions that are amended or that supplement the normative act shall be harmoniously integrated in the act that is amended and supplemented and the unity of style and terminology, as well as natural succession of the Articles or points, shall be followed.

(3) In case of amending or supplementing only one article of one normative act, the title of the act on amendments or additions shall directly refer to the Article that it amends or supplements, and to the respective act.

(4) In case adoption of a new normative act requires subsequent amendment of other normative acts, the respective amendments are introduced in the draft normative act in the chapter on transitional provisions or in a separate draft act on amendments and is submitted together with the main normative act which is adopted.

(5) In case when it is not possible to elaborate the draft normative act on amendments regulated in paragraph 4 at the same time with presentation of the main draft normative act, it shall be presented within the time limit indicated in the transitional provisions of the main act, but not later than 6 months since the adoption of the latter.

(6) Normative act whose application is limited in time or which has operative and disposition character cannot be amended or supplemented.

Article 60. Effects of Provisions Referring to Amendment and Addition to Normative Acts

(1) Provisions referring to amendment and additions to normative acts are incorporated, from the date of their entrance into force, in the main act, and are identified with the respective act. Subsequent interventions referring to their amendment and should be related to the main act.

(2) Normative act on amendment and additions, usually, has equal legal effect with the legal effect of the act whose provisions it amends or supplements. In certain cases, the act on amendment or additions is hierarchically superior and has a greater legal effect than the legal effect of the amended or supplemented act.

(3) Proposals concerning amendment and additions of the issued normative act cannot be presented, as a rule, earlier than 6 months since adoption of the act.

(4) In case when a draft normative act was adopted, but did not enter into force yet, its amendment and supplementation is carried out in conditions of Article 56.

Section a 2-a. Invalidation of Normative Acts

Article 61. Need for Invalidation

(1) Invalidation is a technical and legal procedure of abolishment that revokes provisions of normative acts failing to comply with the balance existing between public needs and Normative norms.

(2) Invalidation shall be intended to:

- a) eliminate provisions of a normative act that are contradictory to provisions of another normative act that has the same or greater legal effect;
- b) eliminate discrepancies and irregularities;
- c) exempt the legislation from outdated norms;
- d) avoid parallelisms in the legislation.

Article 62. Types of invalidation

(1) Invalidation may be full or partial.

(2) Full invalidation shall revoke the normative act fully.

(3) Partial invalidation shall revoke certain parts of the normative act.

(4) Invalidation of a legal provision or a normative act always has a permanent character.

Article 63. General Conditions for Invalidation

(1) A normative act shall be invalidated by adopting a separate act that shall have the same or greater legal effect, or in other cases it shall be expressly indicated in the chapter on final dispositions of a normative act.

(2) Within operations of systematization and unification of legislation, issuing authorities/persons may elaborate and issue normative acts on invalidation in order to invalidate several normative acts.

(3) Invalidation may be accompanied by adoption of new norms in the respective field, yet it may be not accompanied by them if invalidating an improper normative act or improper norm.

(4) When elaboration of proposals on invalidation requires time and execution of the actions foreseen in the draft normative act cannot be postponed, or in case a time limit was introduced in this sense, proposals are submitted in maximum 2 months since adoption of the new normative act.

(5) When drafting proposals on invalidation of normative acts issued earlier or of their parts, one should clarify if their action was not extended through subsequent acts also on other categories of organizations, objectives or persons. In case the norm has been extended and shall preserve its validity, the draft should provide for a solution that shall take into consideration the extension, and the acts concerning the extension shall be included in the list of documents to be invalidated.

(6) Normative acts that follow to be invalidated include not only acts or their parts that contradict the new act or that were incorporated in it, but also acts or their parts that in fact have earlier lost their validity, however were not formally invalidated.

(7) Temporary normative acts or their parts whose validity term expired shall not be included in the list of normative acts to be invalidated. When including the respective act or its parts in the category of temporary acts is uncertain, the act or its parts shall be included in the list.

(8) When the normative act includes permanent norms which are in force and all these norms follow to be invalidated at the same time with the temporary norms whose validity term expired, the list of acts to be invalidated shall include the act in its entirety.

(9) If normative act lost its validity, it shall be included in its entirety in the list of acts that follow to be invalidated, regardless of the points included in it which served as the basis for invalidating earlier issued normative acts.

(10) If more than two normative acts follow to be invalidated, the list of acts shall be included in the Annex to the draft normative act that invalidates them.

Article 64. Moment of Invalidation

(1) Should a normative act invalidate a previously adopted normative act as a whole, it shall specifically render the previous act null and void from the moment the invalidation act enters into force.

(2) Should provisions of the new normative act enter into effect at different times, it shall specifically stipulate that invalidation shall take place respectively according to the stages the new normative act enters into effect.

(3) The earlier invalidated act shall not be reinstated in force in case of invalidation of the act that triggered its invalidation. In order for the earlier invalidated act to be reinstated in force, it shall be adopted repeatedly.

Article 65. Normative Acts Declared Unconstitutional

(1) Normative acts or some of their parts become null and void from the moment when Constitutional Court adopts the respective decision, according to paragraph (1) Article 140 of the Constitution, without there being a need to adopt a normative act on invalidation.

(2) Within maximum two months from the date the decision of the Constitutional Court is published in Monitorul Oficial, the Parliament, Government, central public authorities, authorities of autonomous territorial units with special legal status and local public administration authorities shall present the draft normative acts on amendment or addition of the normative acts declared unconstitutional for approval of the competent body.

(3) Draft normative acts mentioned in paragraph (2) shall be elaborated in accordance with the procedure established by the present Law.

Section 3. Coming into Force of Normative Acts

Article 66. Coming into Force of Normative Acts

(1) Normative acts of the Parliament, Government, specialized central public authorities, authorities with autonomous or local status come into force on the date of their publication in Monitorul Oficial of the Republic of Moldova or on the date indicated in the text. Publication of normative acts is carried out in the order provided in the Law no. 173-XIII dated 06 July 1994 on the Manner of Publication and Coming into Force of Official Acts. Normative acts are also made public by posting them in authorized places.

(2) Normative acts shall be published under conditions of the law in Monitorul Oficial of the Republic of Moldova or Monitorul oficial of rayons, municipalities and of autonomous territorial units, under the responsibility of their heads.

(3) Normative act that has been amended or supplemented substantially shall be republished under conditions of the Law no. 92 dated 01 April 2004 on the Procedure of Publication and Republication of Normative Acts and of their Rectifications, based on the provision from the respective act on amendment or addition. Republication is mandatory when significant changes have been introduced in the normative act (more than one third of the main structural elements).

Article 67. Rectifications

(1) When some material errors are found in the content of the normative act after its publication, a note shall be published that should include necessary rectifications, in accordance with the Law no. 92 dated 01 April 2004 on the Procedure of Publication and Republication of Normative Acts and of their Rectifications.

(2) Rectification shall be carried out based on the request of public authority that issued the act.

Chapter VI

(2) In case specified in paragraph (1), letter c), the issuing authority may take measures to prevent termination of the normative act.

Section 2. Effect of Normative Acts in Space and on a Range of Persons

Article 73. Effect of Normative Acts in Space

(1) Normative act shall be applicable on the entire territory of the Republic of Moldova, as well as in areas recognized as the territory of the state, with exceptions specified by international treaties that the Republic of Moldova is a party to, and by the norms of international law.

(2) Normative acts and some of their provisions may be also applicable beyond the territory of the Republic of Moldova, in compliance with international treaties that the Republic of Moldova is a party to, and general principles of international law.

Article 74. Effect of Normative Acts on a Range of Persons

(1) A normative act shall be applicable to:

- a) citizens and legal persons of the Republic of Moldova;
- b) foreign citizens and stateless persons on the territory of the Republic of Moldova;
- c) foreign legal persons located on the territory of the Republic of Moldova.

(2) Effect of the normative act in relation to persons specified by letter b) and c) of paragraph (1) shall be established by international treaties that the Republic of Moldova is a party to, and general principles of international law.

Chapter VIII.

MONITORING IMPLEMENTATION AND REEXAMINATION OF NORMATIVE ACTS

Article 75. Monitoring Implementation of Normative Acts

(1) Normative acts adopted by the Parliament, Government, central public authorities, authorities of autonomous territorial units with the special legal status and local public administration authorities need to be monitored in order to identify their level of implementation.

(2) Monitoring implementation of normative acts shall be carried out after the expiry of 2 years after the date when the act entered into force by the institution responsible for its implementation, in coordination with the Ministry of Justice.

(3) The mechanism of monitoring the process of implementation of the normative act shall be established by the Government.

(4) After finalization of the process of monitoring implementation of the normative act, the institution responsible for monitoring shall prepare a monitoring report that shall include the following information:

- a) functionality of the normative act;
- b) level of fulfilling the objectives and purpose of the normative act;
- c) level of applying the necessary secondary legal framework;
- d) efficiency of normative act;
- f) conclusions and recommendations.

(5) In case when the need to introduce amendments and/or additions was identified in the process of monitoring the implementation of the normative act, the results of the monitoring report may represent a basis for justifying the need of elaborating the respective draft normative act.

Article 76. Review of Normative Acts

(1) Review of normative acts shall include analysis of their content with the purpose of evaluating their compatibility with the Constitution of the Republic of Moldova, with other normative acts in force at the moment of reexamination, as well as with the regulations of the European Union legislation. Review of normative acts shall be made periodically, at least once in two years.

(2) The review shall be made by the bodies responsible for implementation of the normative acts.

(3) Following the review, proposals for amending or supplementing normative acts may be presented with the purpose of updating them. At the same time, a list with outdated normative acts shall be prepared and their official invalidation shall be ordered.

(4) Review of normative acts shall include the following stages:

- a) identifying the scope of acts that require analysis, and grouping them according to their topics;
- b) considering each act separately for its relevance and efficiency; existence of any parallelism or contradictions with other legislative acts; existence of gaps in their provisions; opportunities for uniting the fragmented norms; identifying outdated character of the act or of some of its provisions.

Chapter IX

(2) The Parliament and Government shall register the adopted acts in their internal registers.

(3) Originals of normative acts of the Parliament and Government shall be kept in the internal archives, classified as 'To be kept permanently'.

(4) Central public authorities, authorities of autonomous territorial units with the special legal status and local public administration authorities register their normative acts in their internal register of normative acts.

(5) Departmental normative acts issued by specialized central public administration authorities are registered by the Ministry of Justice in the State Register of Departmental Normative Acts, according to the established procedure, only after their approval.

(6) Official record of the normative acts shall be kept by the Ministry of Justice according to the procedure established by the legislation in force, by using one or several forms simultaneously:

- a) according to the card index;
- b) in registers;
- c) in the electronic format;
- d) according to the Official Legislation Classifier.

CHAPTER X.

PROVISIONS CONCERNING THE DRAFTING OF NORMATIVE ACTS ON CONCLUSION, SUSPENSION, DENUNCIATION OR TERMINATION OF INTERNATIONAL TREATIES

Article 81. Norms concerning the Drafting of Normative Acts to Approve International Treaties

(1) Normative acts on conclusion, suspension or termination of international treaties are subjected to a special procedure established by the Law no. 595-XIV dated 1999 on International Treaties of the Republic of Moldova.

(2) Draft normative acts are submitted for adoption together with the text of international treaties in the language of the original documents, together with the official translation of the document in the state language, authorized according to the prescribed procedure.

(3) Texts of international treaties that require approval are stamped on each page, and the last page shall attest the conformity of the document with the original through the signature of the authorized person and the application of the stamp.

(4) According to Article 86 paragraph (1) of the Constitution of the Republic of Moldova, the President of the Republic of Moldova shall express his opinion about the international treaty to be concluded in the name of the Republic of Moldova, which is proposed for ratification, adoption, approval or accession, within the period of time not exceeding 60 days from the date of its submission by the Government of the Republic of Moldova.

(5) Provisions of paragraphs (1)-(3) are also applicable in case of approval by the Government of the draft laws concerning ratification, adoption, approval or accession to the international treaties.

Article 82. Application of Norms of Legal Technique

(1) Norms of legal technique are also similarly applicable to the draft normative acts concerning conclusion, suspension, or termination of international treaties.

(2) The title of the draft normative act, as well as its content shall include the integral name, date and place of adoption/conclusion of the international treaty to which the reference is made. Depending on the situation, the title should express the idea of conclusion, suspension, denunciation or termination of international treaties.

(3) In case of conclusion, suspension or termination of international treaties, a separate normative act shall be elaborated for each treaty.

Chapter XI.
FINAL AND TRANSITIONAL PROVISIONS

Article 83. Coming into Force

(1) The present Law shall come into force within 3 months after its publication.

(2) Until the present Law comes into force, the Government shall approve the secondary normative framework on elaboration, approval, monitoring and evaluation of public policy documents, as well as on elaboration of public policy proposals based on the Methodology of ex-ante analysis of the impact of public policies.

(3) The following Laws are invalidated on the date the present Law comes into force:

- a) Law no. 317-XV dated 18 July 2003 on Normative Acts of the Government and other Central and Local Public Administration Authorities;
- b) Law no. 780-XV dated 27.12.2001 on Legislative Acts.
