Human rights defenders carry out their human rights activities individually or jointly with others, as part of an informal group or as a non-governmental organization, and act in a voluntary capacity or professionally. The key characteristic that defines human rights defenders is not who they are, but what they do and the principles they stand for.*

IMPORTANT: If you have advanced knowledge and skills in human rights monitoring and reporting and digital security, we encourage you NOT to apply. The training is designed for human rights defenders with limited experience in this area.
