EU statement on the imprisonment of environmental activist Andrei Zatoka in Turkmenistan

Recently, the EU has learned that Mr. Andrei Zatoka, a prominent environmental activist, was arrested in Turkmenistan and subsequently sentenced to a maximum possible imprisonment of five years on charges of causing injury with intent. The EU has noted with great concern credible reports by international NGOs indicating that the arrest was arbitrary and that during the trial severe violations of due process and international fair trial standards and OSCE commitments were observed. These violations raise serious doubts about the verdict handed down to Mr Zatoka by the Dashoguz Court on 29 October.

The EU urges the authorities of Turkmenistan to conduct a thorough review of all aspects of this particular case having regard to the need for full respect for national legislation and international standards, as well as OSCE commitments. The EU will continue to follow this case closely and would welcome additional information on it by the delegation of Turkmenistan.
