Human rights and double standards in Europe

Today's discussion is devoted to the international instruments on human rights, and the legal documents designed to protect the rights of people all over the world. But it seems to me that for some reason, when some people say the world, they consider just Europe, the United States and several other countries. I think all these international documents were prepared just the people living in those countries to live in peace and reconciliation.

Today in Europe when a man's nose bleeding all international organisations disseminates statements, held meetings, leading media outlets talks about it, shares the news. But there are countries that are experiencing tragedies every day people are dying, no one is talking about it.

I can talk about the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict, I can talk about the killing of thousands of people. But today I want to draw your attention to these Azerbaijani citizens. Dilgam Asgarov and Shahbaz Guliyev - they are from Kelbajar, which is under occupation by Armenia nowadays. These two men are in Nagorno-Karabakh, in Shusha Prison now. In July of 2014 Armenian army took hostage these two civilians, held false trial forged through the judicial process, has condemned them.

Today we talked about the international laws and human rights conventions which do not apply to these two persons, no international organization is responsible for Dilgam Asgarov and Shahbaz Guliyev, no media outlet does publish any information about them. Why?! Maybe they dont live in this world ?! Maybe their rights are not human rights?

As a human rights activist I met with the family of the hostages. Dilgam's son Kurdođlu Asgarov, Shahbaz's mother Mrs. Sanam. They ask me why the world community is silent to our problems?! What should I reply to them?!

Should I say that the world is hypocritical? Should I say that there are double standards in Europe? Should I say that every time when we come to Warsaw, to ODIHR Meeting we observe the US-Russia and Russia-Ukraine disputes, and there is no time for other problems?!

I think we should think about it.
