10.00 – 11.30	SESSION I: Quality of information and future of journalism in the age of digital transformation, “fake news” and disinformation The rolling dynamics of 24/7 news, journalism and media production mean that the news is constantly being reported, commented on and distributed across the globe. The new and still-evolving media eco-system is much more complex than anything we have seen before. Internet, social media and mobile telephony have enabled millions to express themselves and potentially reach the whole connected world with their individual messages. The downside of the omnipresent communication is the pervasive presence of salacious, harmful and illegal content online. The experts will share their experience in dealing with the new media reality and assess the future of quality journalism in the complex environment. Moderator: Inga Sikorskaya, Director, School of Peacemaking and Media Technology in Central Asia Panellists: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Mikhail Komissarov, Deputy Chairman, Information Committee, Ministry of Information and Communication of Kazakhstan - Marek Bekerman, Programme Leader in MA International Journalism, University of Salford, United Kingdom - Daniil Kislov, Chief Editor, Ferghana news agency - Azat Seyitmuhammedov, Founder and CEO, Arzuw.NEWS - Qurbonali Rahmonzoda, Chief Editor, Jumhuriyat newspaper, Tajikistan - Discussion
11.30 – 12.00	GROUP PHOTO & COFFEE BREAK

12.00 – 13.30	SESSION II: How is disinformation growing and how to counter it? A growing number of states in the OSCE area decided to regulate and penalise online content, particularly, such content on social networks which is perceived as threatening the democratic institutions and provoking unrest. Yet, journalists as gate-keepers of democracy have long been professionally dealing with false information, tainted sources and biased narratives. Among participating States there is increased attention to media literacy for citizens and a growing number of fake-busting online resources. Would their tools be enough to inoculate the society against dangerous messages? Moderator: Adil Jalilov, Director, MediaNet International Center for Journalism, Kazakhstan Panellists: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Tore Bergsaker, Deputy Editor-in-Chief, Faktisk., Norway - Gulnara Babadjanova, Director, In-service Training Centre for Journalists, Uzbekistan - Nuriddin Karshiboev, Chairperson, National Association of Independent Mass-Media, Tajikistan - Tamir Ukhnaa, Deputy Head of the Board of Directors, Media Council of Mongolia - Discussion
13.30 – 15.00	LUNCH (Aroma Restaurant, 1 st floor)
14.30 – 15.00	SIDE EVENTS (3 rd floor)
	Side event 1 (room “Zaysan”): User generated content: response, risk, responsibility Organizer: School of Peacemaking and Media Technology in Central Asia Presenter: Inga Sikorskaya Language: Russian According to media monitoring, about 25% of Kyrgyzstan’s Internet users have contributed to the production of news, provided comments on news topics, and shared news through social media. The latest trends show a growing user participation in the news process. Professional media make heavy use of user-generated content. In fact, this phenomenon has challenged long-standing journalistic values and changed journalism itself. There are new risks and a need for increased responsibility. What should be an optimal relationship between journalist- and user-generated content? What are the obstacles, and challenges to achieving it? The presenter will raise these questions at the side event.	Side event 2 (room “Balkhash”): "Fact-checking and media literacy as necessary and universal tools" Organizer: MediaNet International Center for Journalism/Factcheck.kz Presenters: Pavel Bannikov/Marek Bekerman Language: Russian Fact-checking and media literacy in the context of post-truth era and more hi-tech disinformation become strategically important. At the same time fact-checking has gone beyond being simply a genre of journalism and is now an integral ingredient of media and information literacy which needs to be included in the education system. Following, for instance, the appearance of "deep-fakes", it became obvious that public authorities are more and more interested in fact-checking and media literacy of citizens and want to have strong, professional media in their countries to tell the difference between fakes and factual news. Another important issue is a need to respect the principles of freedom of expression as governments sometimes use the need to combat disinformation as a pretext to stamp down dissent and opposition.
15.15 – 16.15	GROUP DISCUSSIONS (3 rd floor)
	Working group 1 (room “Balkhash”): Countering challenges to freedom of the media in the digital age: regulation or self-regulation? The discussion will focus on tendencies of countering illegal content online, but also instances of hate speech in the mainstream media. While OSCE participating States increasingly introduce legislative tools, journalists’ association and CSOs offer other ways of countering dangerous messages.	Working group 2 (room “Zaysan”): Freedom of expression online and hate speech The discussion will focus on the existing regulatory framework in the region and issues of its application, a joint search of proportionate measures countering a variety of forms of expression comprised in the term 'hate speech'. It will also consider introducing elements of international norms in national legislation. Moderator/Rapporteur: Begaim Usenova, Director,
