FINAL REPORT

Monitoring of election campaign coverage in the media of the Kyrgyz Republic (Parliamentary Elections) February - March 2005

INTRODUCTION

The monitoring was conducted by Internews-Kyrgyzstan and a Swiss-based non-profit organization CIMERA in Kyrgyzstan with the support of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE).

The monitoring period was 6 weeks, between 31 January and 13 March 2005.

The monitoring objects included 43 electronic and 167 print media operating in Bishkek and the country's seven provinces. These consist of state, private and government agency media, including all those accredited by the Central Election Committee (v. Annexes 1 and 2). These media covered the candidates' electioneering efforts (v. Annex 3).

The monitoring methodology was based on an analysis of quantitative and qualitative indicators of the content of the news stories that were published during the 6 weeks of electioneering and television and radio programs broadcast during that period. Electronic media: eight hours of prime-time were tracked daily—from 17.00 until 01.00 o'clock on television and from 07.00 until 15.00 on the radio. Print media: all issues of newspapers, magazines and bulletins that were published during the indicated period were read.

The goal of the monitoring was to record the process of the media operations during the six-week pre-election period, to establish the parameters of distribution of newspaper space and airtime among the candidates for deputy, and to determine the participation of government, public and political structures as subjects involved in electioneering.

The monitoring objectives were to ensure accuracy of monitoring of television, radio and printed media operations, to detect violations of the Election Code, to determine positive and negative aspects of electioneering, to make weekly summaries of monitoring results, and to publish them on the monitoring website.

The quantitative indicators used were seconds for the electronic media and lines for the print media. The margin of error in the estimates was 5 seconds for the electronic media and 10 lines for the print media.

The qualitative indicators were determined by the tone of statements in television and radio broadcasts and in publications—positive, neutral, or negative.

The main monitoring office was in Bishkek, on the premises of Internews Network in Kyrgyzstan. The regional centers were located in 8 towns---Osh, Jalalabat, Batken, Kyzylkiya, Naryn, Karakol, Talas, and Karabalta (v. Annex 4).

The monitoring materials are archived in Bishkek. Electronic and print media were monitored and recorded in the regions using special monitoring tables which were filled in and sent to Bishkek by electronic mail. At the end of the week the disks with the recordings and newspaper files were delivered to Bishkek from the regions by special mail. Bishkek's electronic and print media were monitored and recorded by the main office in Bishkek. The monitoring tables were prepared according to a standard form (v. Annex 5).

The monitoring materials were analyzed by the expert, assistant expert, project administrator and coordinator who also prepared the weekly reports and the final report. Legal review of the monitoring materials was done by the project's legal expert.

Technical support of the monitoring in the main office and in the regional centers was ensured by the project's technical director (v. Annex 6).

The staff for the monitoring project was selected from professional journalists and IT specialists on a competitive basis (v. Annex 7).

ELECTION PROCESS

POLITICAL SITUATION

After the shooting of a peaceful demonstration in Aksy District (Jalalabat Province, Kyrgyzstan) on 17 March 2002 when 6 people were killed, President Askar Akaev initiated adoption of a new Constitution and ensured that the text of the new Constitution, which abolished party lists during parliamentary elections, was made a topic for a referendum. The referendum was held on 2 February 2003, and the Law on the New Version of the Constitution of the Kyrgyz Republic was adopted a result on 18 February 2003. Opposition parties and political movements protested against Akaev's actions, and this protest built up during 2003 and 2004.

The parliamentary elections in 2005 were a stability test for the existing authority headed by A. Akaev. As the election results have shown, this authority proved to be a complete failure. The drastic interference of officials with the election process, the lobbying of those candidates that Akaev favored, the use of judicial bodies and election committees against the candidates Akaev found undesirable, making them withdraw from the election campaign by means of court orders and decisions of the Central Election Committee, judicial cancellation of the 62-percent protest voting (meaning 14,691 voters) against the 85-year-old candidate T. Usubaliev demanding that he be pronounced a winner in the elections, the scandal in the University Constituency where the president's daughter B. Akaeva won creating much controversy – all this resulted in the voters' cup running over and led to revolutionary movements in the provinces and in Bishkek. As a result of all this the opposition leaders supported by thousands of voters asked that the parliamentary elections of 27 February and 13 March be pronounced invalid. They demanded that the Kyrgyz President A. Akaev resign, that presidential elections be held early, and that parliamentary elections be held again after that. By 24 March 2005 the state administrations in a number of provinces and the government headquarters in Bishkek were occupied by the protesting voters. A Coordinating Committee was promptly created, with all leaders of the current opposition a part of it. This agency controlled the situation in the country, which saw the end of the era of Kyrgyzstan's first president Askar Akaev who in 2000 was reelected to a third term, although the country's Constitution in Paragraph 2, Article 43 clearly states that "the same person cannot be elected President for more than two consecutive terms". On 24 March A. Akaev fled Bishkek and later appeared in Moscow, where on 4 April he formally resigned his presidency. Since 24 March 2005 Kurmanbek Bakiev has been the acting head of state. The end of Akaev's career was a logical consequence of a constitutional violation.

Jogorku Kenesh (Parliament) of the Kyrgyz Republic

It has been in operation since the country proclaimed its independence. The parliament elected A. Akaev president of the country in 1990. The members of the parliament were elected at a time when the Soviet Union still existed. In 1991 Akaev was elected president by a popular vote. The parliament adopted the Constitution of the independent state in 1993. In 1995 parliamentary and presidential elections were held by popular vote. A. Akaev was reelected to a second presidential term. After this he introduced changes into the Constitution with the purpose of enlarging his powers and introducing a bicameral parliament with partial party-list elections, which he managed to do by means of a popular referendum (before the parliament was unicameral and the elections were held without party lists).

In 2000 elections to a bicameral parliament were held along with presidential elections by popular vote. A. Akaev was reelected to a third presidential term (while the constitutional norm of two terms remained unchanged). In 2003 he introduced amendments to the Constitution in order to create a unicameral parliament and to abolish the party-list election system. He succeeded in doing this by popular referendum.

In 2005 his initiative of creating a parliament on the basis of absolute allegiance to the head of state failed as the electorate put an end to Askar Akaev's initiatives.

LEGISLATION

Legal regulation of election campaign coverage

The Constitution that was adopted on the Twelfth Session of Kyrgyzstan's Supreme Council of the twelfth convocation on 5 May 1993 was amended by the Law on the New Version of the Constitution of the Kyrgyz Republic of 18 February 2003. The law was adopted by referendum on 2 February 2003. The provisions regarding parliamentary elections have been changed considerably.

According to Article 54 of the new Constitution Kyrgyzstan's Jogorku Kenesh (Parliament) consists of 75 deputies elected for a term of five years in single-member constituencies. The earlier proportional-majority electoral system (which required party lists for voting) has been changed.

Kyrgyzstan's Election Code has also been significantly changed and amended by the Law of 24 January 2004. Chapter 6 of the Code entitled Electioneering is completely devoted to campaigning and is the basic document for the media and journalists in their work during the election campaign.

According to Article 30, Paragraph 2 of the Election Code, candidates, political parties, and electoral blocs can campaign in ways allowed by law and using legal methods:

- to promote participation in the elections,
- to freely and thoroughly discuss the candidates' electoral programs, their political, business, and personal qualities,
- to electioneer for or against any candidates in the mass media.

The following are regarded as electioneering during the election campaign:

- urging to vote for certain candidates or against them,
- showing preference for a candidate,
- describing possible consequences of a candidate's election or lack thereof.

Electioneering begins on the last day of the candidates' registration and ends 24 hours before the voting (Article 31 of the Election Code). If a repeat voting is held, electioneering begins on the day the decision on repeat voting is officially announced and ends 24 hours before the repeat voting. Practice has shown that certain candidates and periodical publications do not observe the established timeframes for electioneering, starting it before the official registration of the candidates is over. In this case both the candidate and the media become administratively liable.

Electoral legislation prohibits electioneering in the foreign media distributed on the territory of Kyrgyzstan (Article 30 of the Election Code). A relevant norm of international law should be observed for the purpose of uniform enforcement of this prohibition. This principle is secured in the Convention on the Standards of Democratic Elections, Electoral Rights and Freedoms in the Member States of the CIS, which states that "the media of one member state of the Convention cannot be used in electioneering during elections on the territory of another state".

Electioneering through the state media can be both free and paid. Free airtime and newspaper space are provided to parliamentary candidates according to the budget estimates approved by Kyrgyzstan's Central Election Committee.

The following warrant free newspaper space provided by the media:

- an identification card of a candidate for Jogorku Kenesh deputy,
- a written request addressed to the head of the publication.

Free newspaper space provided by periodicals of government bodies and local self-governance bodies to each Jogorku Kenesh candidate must be at least the size of one A4 page of text (one typewritten page).

The candidates have the right to free airtime on state television and radio channels that broadcast on the territory where the elections are held. The airtime must be during the times when the television and radio programs have the greatest audience (prime-time), which is between 20:00 and 24:00 (Article 32 of the Election Code).

To ensure equal terms when allocating free airtime and newspaper space, a provision is made for a mandatory drawing of the registered candidates for deputy. The latter apply for the drawing with their respective election committees and the drawing is performed by the election committees together with television and radio companies and with periodicals.

Private media can provide airtime and newspaper space to the candidates on a contractual basis according to the regulations on providing airtime on television and radio and space in periodicals, which are approved by the Central Election Committee. Payment for airtime and newspaper space by the candidates must be done on equal terms and only through relevant campaign funds of the candidates. The amount of payment for airtime and publications in periodicals must be the same for all candidates (Article 30 of the Election Code). Private media cannot refuse to provide newspaper space or airtime to other campaigning participants on the same terms.

The following abuses of media freedom are not allowed during electioneering:

- propaganda to incite social, religious, racial, or ethnic hatred or enmity;
- calls to seizure of power, forcible change of constitutional system, or violation of the state's integrity;
- warmongering;
- other forms of abuse of media freedoms prohibited by the laws of the Kyrgyz Republic.

Other forms include divulging state or other secret protected by law, promoting violence and cruelty in the media, intolerance of other nations or ethnic groups, and distribution of materials that desecrate the national symbols.

The media participating in electioneering cannot allow publications that are untrue and that can cause damage to the candidates' honor and dignity or to their business reputation. These kinds of publications should be distinguished from those that are true, even if they may discredit the candidates. Electioneering participants aggressively exercise their right to campaign both for and against. For this reason claims for the protection of honor, dignity, or business reputation cannot be considered justified if the publication contains facts that are true.

According to Article 36, Paragraph 6 of the Election Code, at the request of the candidate the media which had allowed publications that could damage the candidates' honor, dignity, or business reputation, must publish a rebuttal or give an explanation regarding the article or statement that was contrary to the facts or misrepresented the facts. Rebuttals or explanations are published in a special section on the same page and using the same font as the information in connection to which they are published. In periodicals they are published in the following issue, and rebuttals or explanations on television or radio are made during the airing immediately following the receipt of rebuttal or explanation.

Moreover, the media and journalists could refer to three laws: On the Mass Media of 02 July 1992, On Guarantees and Freedom of Access to Information of 05 December 1997 and On Protection of Professional Activities of Journalists of 05 December 1997.

LEGAL RESTRICTIONS ON ELECTION COVERAGE BY THE MEDIA

On the basis of Article 30 of the Election Code campaigning during elections can be conducted through the mass media.

Article 32 of the Code does not allow to interrupt candidates' statements or to make any comments during these statements.

On 09 July 2004 the Central Election Committee approved the Interpretation of the "issues of information support of elections".

According to Article 8 of Kyrgyzstan's Election Code the term "information support of elections" contains two concepts: "voters' awareness" and "electioneering".

Creating voters' awareness involves distribution of informational materials about the facts and events (which, according to Paragraphs 3 and 4 of the Law on Guarantees and Freedom of Access to Information" must be objective, open and true and must ensure that the candidates have equal access to the media) by government and local self-governance bodies, election committees and others in the media and by other means.

Media editorial offices must observe the rule, which states that messages on pre-election activities must be communicated in television and radio programs or in news publications in periodicals as a separate information unit, without comments, in the form of objective information about events that took place during the election campaign, without neglecting information about pre-election activities of certain candidates in favor of information about other candidates.

In these information units there should be no preference for any candidates, political parties, or electoral blocs, including preference in terms of airtime for the coverage of their pre-election activities or the amount of newspaper space allocated for these kinds of messages.

A commentary on the Election Code has been prepared by a group of authors which included the Chair of the Central Commission on Elections and Referenda and two CEC members with the purpose of rendering practical assistance to the participants of the electoral process in ensuring that their rights are exercised and protected during the preparations for the elections and during the elections.

The commentary on Article 32 Paragraph 5 of the Code states that "during electioneering the state media, their officials, and staff must refrain from showing support or preference of any candidates or their electoral programs in any form in their statements, items, or programs. When covering events related to the election campaign news programs on television and the radio shall not show preference for any candidates.

It is not allowed to include political advertisements in advertisement sections during information programs or in any other advertisement sections".

However, certain media (KTR and KOORT television as well as Vechernij Bishkek newspaper) regularly allowed statements, items, and articles of this kind.

Notably, it was impossible for the voters (viewers or readers) to distinguish between electioneering and election coverage. The media failed to inform the voters about the items' electioneering nature or absence thereof, since the electoral legislation states that a reference to the client and producer is required for distribution of printed electioneering materials only, making it possible to trace the campaign fund expenses (Article 35 of the Code).

MEDIA-RELATED LAWSUITS DURING ELECTIONS

No cases of lawsuits against the media or journalists that would be directly related to electioneering violations have been recorded.

MSN newspaper

In the second half of January 2005 a lawsuit was filed with Oktyabr District Court by ZAO Izdatel'skij Dom Vechernij Bishkek against MSN OsOO and the journalists of MSN newspaper R. Prizhivoit and L. Lee demanding moral damages and protection of business reputation in connection with five articles: Razdalsya Golos iz Pomoiki: Golosuite za Algu...! (Lo, a Voice from a Scrapyard: Vote for Alga..!) of 08 October 2004, Pochyem Nynche Stat' Deputatom (How Much Does it Cost to Become a Deputy Nowadays?) in the same issue, etc. ZAO Izdatel'skij Dom Vechernij Bishkek demanded 5 million soms ($125,000) from MSN, 200,000 soms ($5000) from R. Prizhivoit, and 50,000 soms ($1250) from L. Lee as compensation for moral damages.

A similar lawsuit on protection of honor, dignity and business reputation was filed with the same court by O. Bezborodova, a candidate for deputy, against MSN OsOO and the newspaper's journalist R. Prizhivoit in connection with the publication of the article Lo, a Voice from a Scrapyard: Vote for Alga..! of 08 October 2004 and other articles, claiming 2 million soms ($50,000) payable by MSN OsOO and 100,000 soms ($2500) by R. Prizhivoit.

Both lawsuits are currently pending.

Notes on the Print Media section:

The political organization entitled People's Movement of Kyrgyzstan has published an appeal to the voters in 100 lines (Respublika newspaper of 09 February 2005) urging them to come to the elections and not to allow the governing authority deceive them again.

A group of organizations, Civil Solidarity for Fair Elections, has published an appeal to the voters in 200 lines (Aalam newspaper of 08 February 2005) urging them to be proactive and show fairness in electing the deputies.

State newspapers published a statement of the Kyrgyz President A. Akaev, in which he accuses MSN, an independent newspaper, of libel on him and his family members - 250 lines (see Slovo Kyrgyzstana newspaper of 18 February 2005). This statement was published in Russian and Kyrgyz in all state newspapers of Kyrgyzstan.

A statement of the representatives of real-estate developer associations addressed to the KR CEC Chairman S. Imanbaev and the OSCE Ambassador in Kyrgyzstan M. Mueller was published – 500 lines (see Slovo Kyrgyzstana newspaper of 18 February 2005). In the statement they dispute the facts set forth in the report of the Coalition for Democracy and Civil Society on the monitoring of the election period.

Tribuna newspaper (of 17 February 2005) published a 300-line article citing the opinions of people from various parts of the country on the cases of open bribery of votes by the candidates for the Kyrgyz Parliament. The article was written by IWPR (UK-based Institute for War & Peace Reporting) contributors.

On 16 February 2005 Vechernij Bishkek newspaper held a celebration on the occasion of its 30th anniversary (the newspaper was founded in January 1974). The newspaper reported on its anniversary celebration in its Friday issue (see Vechernij Bishkek of 18 February 2005). The newspaper's editorial staff has intentionally timed this anniversary event to be held during the electioneering period. During the fourth week of electioneering the state media featured advertisements related to the newspaper's anniversary. This violates the norm of Kyrgyzstan's Election Code, which in Article 30, Paragraph 2 states that "it is forbidden to conduct anniversary or other celebrations of public and state significance during the electioneering period".

On 24 February a group of voters tried to barge into the office of MSN newspaper. In their hands they held placards with insulting statements addressed to the newspaper's editor and journalists. They were neutralized with the help of the police.

On 24 February the power supply to the Media Support Foundation printing facilities, which print virtually all opposition newspaper, was cut off. The printer had to resort to independent power supply through portable power generators. The power supply was not restored between 24 February and 27 February (the ballot day), which resulted in the newspapers being printed in black-and-white, as opposed to their usual color format. On 14 March, after the second round of the elections was over, the power was restored.

The editor of Tribuna, Y. Omurzakov, published an item stating that a citizen of Uzbekistan, Abdumitalip Khakimov, has been elected deputy of Kyrgyzstan's Jogorku Kenesh (Parliament) during the first ballot (see issue of 3 March 2005). The Constitution of Kyrgyzstan does not allow foreign citizens to be elected to Jogorku Kenesh.

Jany Kylym newspaper (of 03 March 2005) published a survey that mentions the names of 19 candidates who had advanced to the second round. Article 31, Paragraph 3 of Kyrgyzstan's Election Code states that publication of surveys in the media is prohibited starting with the moment of the candidates' registration.

On 4 March 2005 the National Forum of Kyrgyzstan's Manufacturers was held in Bishkek with the KR President A. Akaev participating. State newspapers covered this event. Article 30, Paragraph 2 of the Election Code prohibits events of public or state significance during the election campaign.

On March 8 OSCE Center in Bishkek made a statement expressing concern about the roads blocked and public buildings occupied by the voters and about aggressive and humiliating speeches shown on television and published in the press.

On March 10 twenty deputies of the current Legislative Assembly of Jogorku Kenesh (Parliament) of Kyrgyzstan made a public statement expressing their distrust of the Central Election Committee and demanding that the Kyrgyz President A. Akaev decree early election of the country's president and extend the term of the current Parliament until November 2005.

On March 10 the President of Kyrgyzstan A. Akaev addressed the voters urging them to actively participate in the second round of the elections to Jogorku Kenesh (Parliament of Kyrgyzstan). He denounced the appeals to annul the results of the parliamentary elections and to decree early presidential elections.

On March 10 a group of 26 candidates for deputy who have been elected in the first round made a public statement urging the voters to ignore the instigating appeals and to vote in the second round.

Jany Ordo newspaper (of 11 March 2005) published a survey that mentioned the names of 17 candidates who participated in the second round of the elections to Jogorku Kenesh (Parliament).

Demokrat newspaper (of 11 March 2005) published a special supplement for the voters on the topic of the elections - 4 pages, 40,000 copies.

CONCLUSIONS

Kyrgyzstan's Central Election Committee has registered 90 media for participation in the Jogorku Kenesh election campaign. The Monitoring of Election Campaign Coverage in the Media project has covered 202 media.

During the coverage of the elections to Jogorku Kenesh serious violations have been committed. NTRK and KOORT channels featured electioneering on the evening of 26 February, which violates the norms of the Election Code, which in Article 31, Paragraph 1 states that "electioneering ends 24 hours before the voting". Also, during the day on 13 March (a period prohibited by the Election Code) NTRK showed a debate in which candidates for deputy participated.

Cases of violations of norms related to the use of campaigning have been recorded. The newspapers Jany Kylym and Jany Ordo published surveys that mentioned the names of candidates for deputy, although Article 31, Paragraph 3 of the Election Code states that publication of surveys in the media is prohibited starting with the moment of the candidates' registration.

Events of public and state significance were held during the electioneering period and were covered by the media. On 16 February 2005 Vechernij Bishkek newspaper held a celebration on the occasion of its 30th anniversary (the newspaper was founded in January 1974). The newspaper reported on its anniversary celebration in its Friday issue (see Vechernij Bishkek of 18 February 2005). During the fourth week of electioneering the state media featured advertisements related to the newspaper's anniversary. On 4 March the National Forum of Kyrgyzstan's Manufacturers was held in Bishkek with the KR President A. Akaev participating. State newspapers covered this event.

We should point out a gap in the election legislation, which does not differentiate between electioneering and coverage of the pre-election process. During electioneering the media featured a significant number of programs on the candidates, often giving information about the candidates in a negative tone. Meanwhile, the voters were unable to tell which of these was electioneering and which was news coverage of the elections. This both misleads the voters and violates the basic principles of journalism ethics.

Moreover, the staff of certain media (KTR and KOORT television as well as Vechernij Bishkek newspaper) often explicitly demonstrated preference to certain candidates and their electoral programs. In the print media some newspapers were used as special issues (4 pages and more) which were fully or partially devoted to individual candidates (over 20 publications).

During the election campaign there has been pressure upon the media by the authorities. On 17 February 2005 the Kyrgyz President A. Akaev made a statement on national television declaring his intention to bring legal action against MSN newspaper, accusing it of libel.

On 24 February starting with 18:00 the authorities prevented Radio Azattyk from airing on the frequencies accessible to the entire country during electioneering. This was done under the pretext of conducting a radio frequency auction. Starting with that day the station's programs were rebroadcast by Almaz Radio. The station returned to its original radio frequencies on 25 March 2005.

On 24 February the power supply to the Media Support Foundation printing facilities was cut off creating an emergency situation for the print media. The printer had to resort to independent power supply through portable power generators. The power supply was cut off between 24 February and 27 February (the ballot day), which resulted in the newspapers being printed in black-and-white, as opposed to their usual color format. On 14 March, after the second round of the elections was over, the power was restored.

The candidates' media strategies were as follows: for the most part, electioneering was done through advertisement airtime (or newspaper space) in the media. A significant amount of coverage was through news programs on television and newspaper items in the media.
