

I would not go in to the details, but I would like to emphasize that for the 30 November 2014 parliamentary elections, the OSCE Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights (OSCE/ODIHR) deployed an election observation mission (EOM). The OSCE/ODIHR assessed the compliance of the electoral process with OSCE commitments, other international obligations and standards for democratic elections, and with national legislation. For election day, the OSCE/ODIHR EOM joined efforts with delegations from the OSCE Parliamentary Assembly, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and the European Parliament to form an International Election Observation Mission (IEOM).

According to the Statement of Preliminary Findings and Conclusions issued by the IEOM concluded that "the 30 November elections offered voters a wide choice of political alternatives. Contestants enjoyed unimpeded access to the media. The election administration enjoyed the confidence of most stakeholders and the process was generally well administered, with the exception of the functioning of the new electronic system for the processing of voters on election day."

The Moldovan society passes through a deep reform process, the respect for fundamental human rights lying at the core of this changes and there is a continuously committed to building a fair and inclusive society.