Review Conference 2010, Warsaw, 30 September - 08 October 2010
Working Session 5: Rule of Law II

The Policy of State Terrorism of Georgia Against the Republic of South Ossetia in 2004 to 2010

In November 2003 Mikhail Saakashvili came to power in Georgia as a result of the so-called revolution of roses. His principal slogan during the election campaign was based on the thesis aimed at fast and ultimate promotion of Georgian jurisdiction in South Ossetia and Abkhazia. In 2004 Tbilisi started to “defreeze” the conflict between Georgia and South Ossetia in order to break the status quo provided by the 1992 agreements.

With this aim in view Saakashvili opted for provocations based on the policy of state terrorism as a legal form to settle political problems and special operations protracted by appropriate services.

Georgia deliberately started to violate all the previously signed agreements and ignore every basic document on human rights. In so doing it occupied its place among other terrorist organizations internationally.

In 2005 Vano Mirabishvili, Georgian Minister of Internal Affairs, made public a list of South Ossetian citizens sentenced to physical elimination. The list comprised the names of representatives of executive power, members of Parliament and officers of military structures. Georgian special services elaborated a plan which envisaged murder of people who had been included in Merabishvili’s list.

In 2005-2009 36 terrorist attacks were launched in South Ossetia. As a result, 26 people were killed and 56 wounded.

According to the South Ossetian internal services, all the terrorist attacks were plotted and accomplished by officers of the Counter-Intelligence Department of the Ministry of Internal Affairs of Georgia and the Department of Military Police of the Georgian Ministry of Defense.

The general scheme of the attacks was as follows. First they were sanctioned by Vano Mirabishvili, Minister of Internal Affairs of Georgia, in person. His deputy, Amiran Meskheli, who controlled the activity of counter-intelligence task forces of the Ministry of Internal Affairs, was responsible for preparation and fulfillment of attacks. Their immediate execution was entrusted to the Counter-Intelligence Department headed by Shalva Zhghenti, Main Counter-Intelligence Directorate of the Ministry of Internal Affairs supervised by Major Levan Tabidze, particularly its structural unit dubbed a section of group of officers on security and deep cipher issues headed by Captain Levan Akhobadze, as well as the Regional Directorate of the Counter-Intelligence Department of Shida Kartli and Mtianeti headed by Vice Colonel Zaza Didberuashvili in May 2007 and Vice Colonel Ghiya Chitashvili in August 2008.
