OSCE Permanent Council No. 1246 Vienna, 7 November 2019

EU Statement in Response to the Report by the OSCE High Commissioner on National Minorities, Amb. Lamberto Zannier

The European Union warmly welcomes the High Commissioner on National Minorities (HCNM), Ambassador Lamberto Zannier, back to the Permanent Council, and thanks him for his comprehensive statement.

The European Union strongly believes that protection of human rights, including those of persons belonging to national minorities, is crucial for maintaining regional peace and stability. The EU remains committed to ensuring the rights already exercised by persons belonging to national minorities, as enshrined in the applicable UN, Council of Europe Conventions and related protocols and in OSCE commitments on non-discrimination and respect for diversity. Within the EU, the Charter of Fundamental Rights prohibits discrimination on any ground including against persons belonging to national minorities. This protection is bolstered by EU directives tackling discrimination. The rights of persons belonging to national minorities are also an important aspect of our co-operation with all our partner countries, including our closest neighbours, and are consistently raised in our political and human rights dialogues. Also, the EU adopted in March 2019 the EU Human Rights Guidelines on Non-discrimination in External Action. We reiterate that persons belonging to national minorities should be able to exercise fully and effectively their human rights and fundamental freedoms without discrimination and in full equality before the law. We reiterate the importance of an effective implementation of legislation on the protection of human rights including those of persons belonging to national minorities and their non-discriminatory treatment throughout the territory of participating States.

We underline that conflict prevention and early warning continue to be among our top priorities. The mandate of the High Commissioner on National Minorities, providing early warning and seeking early action with regard to tensions involving persons belonging to national minorities, is of utmost importance for the OSCE concept of comprehensive security. We reiterate our full support for the mandate and autonomy of the HCNM and underline that co-operation of all participating States is necessary to enable the High Commissioner to fulfil his mandate.

We support the HCNM's active engagement throughout the OSCE region. We commend the efforts to improve sustainable integration of diverse and multiethnic societies, as well as political representation of persons belonging to national minorities. We welcome the HCNM's focus on effective implementation of legal frameworks on the rights of persons belonging to national minorities, as well as his continued engagement with regard to language and education issues, dialogue facilitation, effective participation in public affairs and property rights, access to media and the right to practice a religion in the mother tongue of persons belonging to national minorities where applicable.

Further, we welcome the continued focus of the High Commissioner on thematic work, and efforts to promote implementation of the Institution's rich body of thematic guidelines and recommendations. In this regard, we particularly look forward to the 20th anniversary of the Lund Recommendations on the Effective Participation of National Minorities in Public Life next week in Lund, Sweden. We agree that participation of persons belonging to national minorities in decision-making is an asset which generates substantive gains and as such, is approached not only from a rights-based perspective but also through a conflict prevention lens. We fully subscribe to your view that true participation cannot disregard the meaningful inclusion of women, including women belonging to national minorities.

Moreover, we reiterate the importance of taking a gender-sensitive approach in all your activities. Women belonging to national minorities can be exposed to multiple and intersecting forms of discrimination and we need to do more to ensure their participation in the OSCE's work. As you have pointed out before, this is a fundamental prerequisite for social cohesion and conflict prevention.

Further, we appreciate the HCNM's continued close cooperation with other relevant structures and institutions of the OSCE as well as with other relevant international and regional institutions, in particular the UN, the EU, and the Council of Europe. With regard to the latter, we commend your continuous engagement in order to ensure the implementation of the Venice Commission's opinions. With regard to cooperation with the UN, we value your important work with regard to the issues of statelessness.

Last but not least, we welcome the special attention you give to youth. We share your view that "focusing on youth allows us to address the root causes of segregation and exclusion, which often contribute to divisions in society and ultimately conflict, from the onset".

We look forward to continuing the co-operation with the High Commissioner and his excellent team and wish them every success.
