OSCE SOUTH EAST EUROPE MEDIA CONFERENCE
18-19 June 2019 – Dom mladih, Sarajevo

Session 1
Media freedom developments and sustainability in the region

Session 2
Safety of Journalists

Session 3
Role of the Public Service Media in the 21st century –
The regional reality and the road ahead

Session 4
Legal framework and challenges –
How to implement international standards?

This year’s event, organized together with the OSCE Mission to Bosnia and Herzegovina, is focused on media development and sustainability, safety of journalists, the legal environment for media freedom and sustainable solutions for public service broadcasters. The Office of the OSCE Representative on Freedom of the Media has previously organized South East Europe Media Conferences in Sarajevo, Belgrade, Tirana, Budapest and Struga, in order to further promote freedom of the media and its development in the region.

The event will provide a platform to discuss relevant media freedom issues, and present good initiatives and best practices with local and international experts, civil society organizations, members of the international community, and government authorities. It will aid in the creation of better synergies and contribute to the spirit of co-operation, a crucial component for improving the quality of, and conditions for, free media in South East Europe. The event will also feature a number of side events.

Following from the adoption of the Ministerial Decision No. 3/18 on Safety of Journalists in Milan last December, the conference will examine ways in which OSCE participating States can ensure that journalists work in a safe and enabling environment. The Decision, calling on OSCE participating States to “take effective measures to end impunity for crimes against journalists”, is a strong political signal that must be reflected in practice.

Freedom of the media is not only a matter of media workers being able to carry out their work without fear or pressure. There is a clear need for a better understanding of the role of the media in a democratic society, to ensure its economic sustainability and respect for its independence in the face of economic and political pressure. In South East Europe, a lack of mutual trust between the media community and local authorities has resulted in a climate where violations against the independent press can proliferate.

Women journalists are also at particular risk and face a variety of misogynistic and gender-based violence, including online threats, harassment and physical violence. These attacks pose a significant challenge, not only to societies’ right to access a variety of opinions, voices and stories, but also represent a stain on our basic democratic values and human rights.

Media freedom is a cornerstone of democracy, reflecting our own degree of freedom and willingness to protect our shared human rights, including the right to seek, receive and impart information. It contributes, among other things, to holding governments to account, fighting against corruption and improving the quality of our individual lives.

This South East Europe Media Conference will explore new ways of engaging all stakeholders to improve the situation of media freedom in the region through practical steps, and constructive and open dialogue.

Public service media (PSM), though grounded in a solid legal framework, is still vulnerable to various external pressures. A lack of independent and sustainable financial resources remains a major obstacle that must be addressed to ensure that public service broadcasters fulfil their role effectively in the media landscape. Participants from the region, as well as international experts, will discuss how to make the PSM fit for the 21st century digital media landscape, the general situation focusing on good practices, the role of the European Broadcasting Union (EBU), the responsibility of PSM to serve the public interest, and digitalization.

Panelists:
- Alain Gerlache, Senior journalist, Radio Télévision Belge Francophone
- Aiga Grišāne, Head, Media Policy Division at Ministry of Culture, Latvia
- Attila Márton, Acting Editor-in-Chief, Second Program of TV Vojvodina
- David Davin-Power, Journalist, The Times, Ireland edition

Rapporteur: Irina Radu, Senior Media Development Officer, OSCE Presence in Albania

The session will provide a platform to debate how media in South East Europe are regulated by law. It will review the legal conditions for a free press particularly regarding the development of mechanisms ensuring journalists’ access to information, creation of sustainable public media, reform of defamation law, access of political opposition to the media, and denationalization of mass media outlets. Restricting media using the pretext of fighting against terrorism and political extremism should not undermine ideological and political plurality in the media and society.

Panelists:
- Sandra Bašić Hrvatin, Professor, Media Studies Department, University of Primorska
- Joan Barata Mir, Intermediary Liability Fellow, Center for Internet and Society, Stanford Law School
- Jelena Surčulija Milojević, Assistant Professor, Faculty of Political Sciences, University of Belgrade
- Elira Kokona, Secretary General, Director Regulatory and Compliance Department Prime Minister’s Office, Albania
- Zrinjka Peruško, Professor, Chair, Centre for Media and Communication Research Faculty of Political Science, Zagreb
- Željko Rutović, General Director, Directorate of Media, Ministry of Culture, Montenegro

Rapporteur: Stephan Nunner, Political Adviser, OSCE Mission to Skopje
