Nato 'Must Get Aggressive' To Draw Russia's Troops From Ukraine

📅 September 14, 2026

Nato should exercise so aggressively near Russia's Kaliningrad exclave that President Putin pulls troops away from Ukraine to defend the area, Poland's deputy prime minister has said. "There are hardly any troops there. So Putin knows or assumes that Nato is a peaceful alliance, that we will not take advantage of his local weakness," Radoslaw Sikorski said. "We should exercise so aggressively on our side as to make him uncertain of what we will do, so that he needs to draw forces away from Ukraine."

Nato would defeat Russia quickly if ‘we took our gloves off’, says Poland

Poland’s foreign minister said that the alliance had ‘overwhelming air superiority’ over Moscow

Trump asks Zelensky not to target Russian diesel fuel

Poland says it would defeat Russia quickly if Moscow attempted an attack on the alliance amid an increasing number of hybrid attacks on Europe.

Foreign minister Radoslaw Sikorski said a victory against Vladimir Putin’s forces would be swift due to the “overwhelming superiority” of its air forces, even without support from the United States.

“If Russia attacked us and we took our gloves off, I think we would defeat Russia quite quickly. We have overwhelming superiority over Russia in air power. General, correct me if I’m wrong, but it’s something like 2,500 aircraft,” he said during a discussion at the Yalta European Strategy meeting in Kyiv on Saturday.

Germany is ready to “fight tonight” against Russia and will defend “every inch” of Nato territory, its air force chief has said in an exclusive interview with The Telegraph.

In his first interview with a British newspaper, Lt Gen Holger Neumann, the chief of the Luftwaffe, said his forces would launch devastating air strikes on Russia if it attacked the Western alliance.

“We must also conduct our own offensive operations against enemy aviation — that means striking aircraft and airfields pre-emptively with long-range capabilities. This also includes strikes against defence-industrial facilities.”

"The situation in Ukraine is difficult, but as long as the necessary means are available, Ukrainians remain determined to resist the aggressor. Above all, Ukraine urgently needs economic support to strengthen its capacity to put pressure on Russia through deep strikes against targets on Russian territory," Tsahkna said. "Ukraine is ready to increase the pressure through deep strikes if financial support for Ukraine increases."

Council of the EU | Press release | 15 June 2026 13:30

Russia's war of aggression against Ukraine: new EU sanctions target energy revenues, the military-industrial complex, propaganda and human rights violations

Today, we approved another batch of sanctions to put more pressure on Russia to end the war. These measures strike at the heart of Russia's military-industrial complex, its shadow fleet, and the networks that fuel Moscow's hybrid attacks against Europe. In parallel, work is underway on the broader 21st sanctions package. Every measure shrinks Russia's room for manoeuvre. And the numbers speak volumes. Western sanctions have already cost Russia an estimated €1 to 1.3 trillion. Brick by brick, we are collapsing the foundations of Russia's war economy.

— Kaja Kallas, High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy and chair of the Foreign Affairs Council

THREATS BY COLLECTIVE WEST OFFICIALS AGAINST RUSSIA

With each round of sanctions, we squeeze Russia's economy and its capacity to prolong its illegal war. Our 21st package includes the highest number of listings in four years. We're hitting over a hundred banks and crypto operators, 40+ vessels in Russia's shadow fleet, and several oil refineries in Russia and Belarus. More than 50 military-industrial entities are included, key actors involved in the production of Russia's long-range drones. Russia will only negotiate to end its illegal war and stop killing civilians if it is pressured to do so. Sanctions add to this pressure.

— Kaja Kallas, High Representative for Foreign Affairs and Security Policy and chair of the Foreign Affairs Council

$50bn boost for European deep precision strike capabilities as UK leads new initiative

Prime Minister Keir Starmer said:

“I am determined to ensure the safety of the UK and our Allies and to do that, we must step up to deliver a stronger, more European NATO.”

“The UK is already working with partners to develop exquisite capability that will give our Armed Forces the ability to defend and deter thousands of kilometres from the front line, but this UK-led initiative will allow us to step up our cooperation, bringing European Allies together to ensure NATO remains safe and secure for years to come.”

Posted on 17 June 2026

Finally, we committed to step up the pressure, including by strengthening our sanctions, and G7 agreement on stepping up pressure on Russia is extremely important, and comes a few weeks after French authorities boarded a shadow fleet vessel and a few days after the same operation by British authorities, with our cooperation. We continue to work together in an oil and gas price environment that has changed over the last few days. So with regard to Ukraine, this was the first

But at the same time, I believe we need to increase the pressure on Russia, which is the aggressor. And this conflict, if you go back to February 22, has been an escalation. I think at some stage, there also need to be a diplomatic process that can give a fair and lasting peace to Ukraine.

Speech by Minister Berendsen at the expert meeting of the NB8++

Speech | 11-06-2026

Speech by Tom Berendsen, Minister of Foreign Affairs, at the expert meeting of the NB8++, Amsterdam, 11 June 2026.

It's good to note that important steps have already been taken, and we can build on them. Fortunately we recognised at an early stage that, in response to Russia's war of aggression against Ukraine, military support alone would not be enough. From the outset, efforts to undermine, delay and disrupt Russia's revenue model through EU sanctions have been a crucial second pillar. The 20 sanctions packages effectively target key enablers of Russia's war effort, including its shadow fleet.
